OVERVIEW

About the Survey

The spread of the coronavirus (COVID-19) and the many efforts to slow it are impacting communities across the nation. In order to best respond to this crisis, information is needed about the scope and scale of challenges in various communities. This report offers findings of a survey designed to collect information on the effects of COVID-19 on communities and people in low- to moderate-income households and the entities serving them. It was fielded by all 12 Reserve banks and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System¹ between Aug. 5 and Aug. 12, 2020, and resulted in 1,465 responses. Responses were collected through a convenience sampling method that relied on contact databases to identify representatives of nonprofit organizations, financial institutions, government agencies and other community organizations. These representatives were invited by email to participate in an online survey. Similar surveys were conducted in April (see PDF report) and June (see PDF report).

Because these surveys rely on a convenience sampling method, the individuals who receive it and respond to it will vary. Each survey provides an insightful and informative “snapshot” into how COVID-19 was affecting people and organizations on the dates the survey was administered. Due to the differences in the composition of respondents, readers should be careful when making comparisons between findings in the survey reports.

Survey Findings

Overall, the survey finds:

- 64% of respondents indicated COVID-19 was a significant disruption to the economic conditions of the communities they serve and expected recovery to be difficult.
- 38% cited income loss, job loss and unemployment as the top impacts of COVID-19 on the people and communities they serve.
- Over half of respondents (56%) indicated it will take more than 12 months for their communities to return to the conditions prior to the disruption of COVID-19.
- 51% of respondents indicated COVID-19 is having a significant disruption on the entity they represent, with 25% expecting to bounce back quickly after recovery begins.
- 65% indicated demand for their services has increased since early June, and 42% noted a corresponding decrease in their ability to provide services.
- Over a quarter of respondents (27%) indicated their entity could operate for less than six months in the current environment before exhibiting financial distress.
