Financial Well-Being

Financial Capability

Financial Education
To achieve the opportunity economy, it is imperative to providing opportunities for families to build financial capability, defined as having financial knowledge, practicing financial skills and accessing financial products.

These strategies provide on-ramps for families to get on the path toward saving and building assets.
• Age matters:
  – Americans in their 20s and 30s lost the most wealth in the recession and have been the slowest to recover.

• Education matters:
  – Those lacking a high school degree saw their wealth plummet 44 percent between 1989 and 2013.

• Marital status matters:
  – Four out of five couples are married in the top 20 percent of earners.
The current state of financial well-being in America... and Race Matters

The graph shows the median income for different categories in the U.S.:
- All families: $81,456
- Less than 40: $14,220
- 40-61: $106,094
- 62 or older: $209,590
- Less than HS: $17,278
- HS or GED: $50,594
- 4 yr Bach degree: $154,266
- rad/Prof degree: $444,862

The income gap is highlighted for different racial groups:
- Black: $11,184
- Hispanic: $13,900
- Asian: $91,440
- White: $134,008
Watch how privileges or setbacks can pile up for the thrivers and strugglers of America.

#WhatItsWorth

Meet the Thrivers and Strugglers of America
When it comes to financial health, when you are born and enter the job market, the wealth of your parents, race and ethnicity, and more can determine whether you become a “thriver” or a “struggler.”
A Complex Set of Factors Influence Financial Health

- Cash flow is as important an indicator as annual income.
- Income matters, but so do planning and saving.
- Access to financial services is important but insufficient.
- Borrowing and saving are opposite sides of the same coin.
- Financial progress is complex, unpredictable, and often messy.

So What Do We Do About It?

• What It’s Worth offers:
  – Insights into how this affects specific communities
  – Analysis of why financial health and well-being are important to workforce, health, housing, education, and more
  – Specific examples of on-the-ground solutions working in communities today

Housing and Financial Stability

Paul Weech
President/CEO, NeighborWorks America

NeighborWorks America

We are a Congressionally chartered 501(c)(3) with a 38-year history.

We provide grants, technical assistance, and training to a network of more than 245 nonprofit organizations all over the country.

We delivered $184 million in grants last year, $125 million to the network.
We serve the broader housing and community development sector.

We administer the National Foreclosure Mitigation Counseling program—more than two million people helped.

Our training programs provided more than 20,000 certificates last year to housing and community development professionals.
Housing costs are typically the single largest expense in a family’s budget—especially for low-income families.

In 2013, more than 19.3 million households paid more than 50 percent of income for housing. —Joint Center for Housing Studies report

57 percent of U.S. adults considered student debt an obstacle to buying a home. —NeighborWorks America survey

There were 6.7 million seriously underwater properties in the first quarter of this year. —RealtyTrac report
Housing First for homeless families is a predicate for other pathways to financial stability.
Affordable rent frees up disposable income for other basic needs and potentially for savings.
Owning a home with an amortizing mortgage includes built-in savings and potential for wealth accumulation through appreciation.
Supportive housing for seniors and people with disabilities can reduce medical costs.
Housing Stability Matters

Stable housing is a key element of school and employment success.

Stability can also reduce stress and improve health outcomes.

Growing up in a community of opportunity leads to better life outcomes for children.
What Can We Do?

- Housing stability is critical to financial stability.
- Too many Americans face housing instability.
- Proactive housing strategies offer a path to greater financial stability, even for those with relative housing stability.
Affordable Rental Housing Matters

- Housing First strategies for homeless populations
- Supportive housing for seniors and people with disabilities
- Developing and preserving supply of affordable rental housing and housing assistance
- Rent strategies, such as Family Self-Sufficiency, that allow renters to build savings
Focus on Eviction Prevention

• New focus on evictions:
  – In the book Evicted, Matthew Desmond shows that unstable housing causes poverty.
  – NeighborWorks group Community Housing Partners (CHP) is teaching residents financial skills to reduce evictions.
  – They found that every avoided eviction saves $4,000 in operating costs.

Lynn White, a resident at a CHP property, learned how to save money with help from the organization’s financial program.
Embed homebuyer education and housing counseling in the mortgage finance system:

- Clients receiving prepurchase counseling and education from NeighborWorks organizations are one-third less likely to become seriously delinquent than those who did not receive it.*

Expand the availability of hybrid tenure models, such as lease-to-own and shared-equity models, as paths to ownership and asset-building

From Counseling to Coaching

• NeighborWorks America has:
  – Invested in training to become financial counselors
  – Taken staff beyond homebuyer education to coaching for broader financial goals:
    • 57 percent of participants who started with no savings established regular savings following coaching.
    • 48 percent of those who were already saving increased the amount they regularly set aside.
Community Context Matters

- Mixed-income, mixed-tenure housing options
- Access to good schools, health care, and jobs
- Engaged residents helping to shape the future
- Richness in diversity

Every Community Should be a Place of Opportunity
Mixed-tenure housing options: affordable rental housing and homeownership for existing residents

Resident engagement in shaping the future

Complementary investments from other partners in public and private sectors

Community amenities that attract resources and new investments and support livability

Good schools supporting stronger housing values

Diverse, mixed-income communities leading to better life outcomes
The Delivery System Matters

• Social enterprise: Strong, financially stable nonprofits are able to serve more people, coordinate partners, and increase impacts.

• Power of networks: Networks reinforce each others’ work by disseminating innovation and best practices and creating virtual scale through shared services.

• Cross-sector collaboration: Coordination of investments in communities and family financial stability is important.
